Churchwardens have a duty to represent the laity and co-operate with the Priest in Charge. They are expected to lead the parishioners by setting a good example and encouraging unity and peace. They have a particular duty to maintain order and peace in the church and churchyard at all times, and especially during services, although this task tends to be devolved to sidesmen, Churchwardens are legally responsible for all the property and movable goods belonging to the parish church.

Which ever church you attend you will be afforded a warm welcome. After each of the services tea and coffee are usually served, during which time you are able to meet and talk.

The three buildings are distinct in character, All Saints is a Grade II listed building and dates from 1746.
St Oswald's church dates from the early 20th century, whilst St Aidan's Worship Centre is comparatively new, having been built in 1980.

As well as the regular Services in the churches there are many social activities arranged throughout the year. These are advertised in the respective Magazines, announced in church and displayed on posters in local shops.
